INTRODUCTION

HISTORY OF THRUXTON

Thruxton was originally a wartime airfield. Commissioned in 1941 the airfield was host to both the RAF and USAF and played a major part in the D-Day landings as a base for troop-carrying aircraft and gliders.

Motorsport started in 1950 on a track comprising both the runways and perimeter roads. As the deteriorating wartime tarmac was breaking up, plans were underway to redevelop the site.

Motor racing returned on a new track in 1968. The new layout followed the lines of the perimeter road with the inclusion of a chicane and three tight corners in succession. Even with these tight corners, Thruxton is the fastest race circuit in the UK. Thruxton quickly gained a reputation as a real drivers circuit, where success requires total commitment.

Thruxton's fame grew from the Easter Monday Formula 2 meetings where Formula 1 drivers of the day; Graham Hill, Jackie Stewart and Jochen Rindt all thrilled the crowds.

Since then, Thruxton has seen current Formula 1 drivers race at the track at some time in their career. It is now the high-speed rounds of the British Touring Car Championship and British Superbike Championship that regularly bring in capacity crowds.
